Research Experience

1998: Two months of field research in Portugal on "The Politics of Regionalization". Personally conducted over 40 interviews with key national party elites, opinion makers, experts on decentralization, and local and regional-level development agents in all eight of the proposed regions.

October 1993- August 1994: Fulbright Dissertation Fellowship. Carried out field research in Lisbon and Portel, Portugal for my Ph.D dissertation. Designed and carried out a public opinion survey with 240 respondents.

Current Interests/Research

- Ongoing Participant in Portuguese Government-Funded Research Project: The Changing Contexts of Political Behavior: Electoral Choices and Political Attitudes in Contemporary Portugal, Executive Coordinators: André Freire, Marina Costa Lobo and Pedro Magalhães. 2006-2008. This is the continuation of an ongoing research project I have been involved with over the past 5 years. It has resulted in several book chapters with my co-author, including 2 that were published in 2007. The project is currently awaiting another round of funding for the next 3-5 years.
- Invited participant in a new international research project on the Portuguese Parliamentarians and the Mass-Elite Gap in Comparative Perspective. The project is funded by the Portuguese National Assembly, as well as other Portuguese national agencies and the EU. A survey of Portuguese parliamentarians' political attitudes and behavior is currently in the field and a related mass survey of attitudes toward political elites is in the final stages of design, to which I have been contributing questions. We expect to start working with the data later in 2008 and to produce conference papers for possible publication in edited volumes and journals throughout the next 2-3 years.
